Anglo-American duo Rue Royale will release their third album Remedies Ahead on on 30th September 2013 via Sinnbus.

The pair begin on a tense note with with “Change My Grip” which feels like a folkier version of The XX, before heading straight into single Set Out To Discover, one of the album’s highlights. “Pull Me Like A String” is the best of Andrew Bird mixed with the boy / girl vocal harmonies of She & Him whilst there are also moments of old Iron & Wine with “Carving Up Islands”.

Unlike their first two LPs, Rue Royale (2008) and Guide To An Escape (2011), Rue Royale have taken a divergent approach, writing most of their forthcoming work on the road. The pair give the impression of being plucked out of a Wes Anderson film with deliberate, methodical accentuation. Forged from addictive bitter-sweet harmonies, delicate guitar plucks and a patchwork quilt of percussion Remedies Ahead marks a huge step-up for the pair.

Working with co-producer Paul Pilot (Duke Special, Beth Rowley, Athlete) the pair raised funds through Kickstarter with fans pledging with Rue Royale ultimately exceeding their target they decamped to Bat Box studios in Lewes where along with a tailless squirrel they recorded their latest work.

Named after a road running through the Chicago Suburbs, Rue Royale developed from Ruth and Brookln’s transatlantic relationship. With Ruth being brought up on brit-pop and northern soul and Brookln on American folk and southern gospel the pair cite influences as Mark Kozelek, Radiohead, Fleetwood Mac, Bob Dylan, Tom Petty, Wilco and Air creating a contrasting array of threads from which Rue Royale formed their distinct tapestry.

With their previous releases receiving numerous BBC 6Music and XFM plays as well as a huge interest on blogs worldwide the pair have built a steady and loyal following and are now ready to reach out even further with Remedies Ahead.
